

CAR ROBBERS GO TO FEDERAL PEN

Judge Cochran Says He's Determined To Break Up This Crime, If Possible

A bunch of young Lincoln county men, several of whom saw service in the world war, got careless and decided to make some easy money by robbing freight cars after they had gone through King's Mountain tunnel on the Cincinnati Southern railroad in Lincoln county. Of course they were caught. Most of them plead guilty in federal court here this week and Judge A. M. J. Cochran sent most of them to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

The boys, for nearly all of them were around 22 or 23 years of age—robbed the cars and sold it to country merchants. Hugh Jacobs, one of them charged with knowingly receiving stolen goods failed to answer to his name and a $50 reward is offered for him. Jacobs also faces a charge of selling moonshine whisky. He has been conducting a country store near King's Mountain in Lincoln county for many years. Heine Wright, 18 years old, was given three years in the Reform School at Ames, Iowa; Clai Houpp, 18, was given 30 days in jail; Shack Coleman received a sentence of a year and a day in the federal penitentiary. The others who confessed and threw themselves on the mercy of the court received sentences of three years in the penitentiary. Judge Cochran said that he was determined to break up this practice of robbing freight cars on the Cincinnati Southern if stiff sentences would do it. Those who go to Atlanta for three years are Dewey Coleman, Evan Sloan, Will Jenkins, Luther Sims, Charles King.

Other sentences imposed by Judge Cochran on the last day of federal court were as follows:

Joe Pittman, moonshining, 3 months in jail.

Charles Witt, manufacturing and possessing whisky, 6 months in jail.

Walter Gadd, possessing whisky, fine of $100.

Pitts Collier, possessing, transporting and sale of liquor, $100 fine.

Phil Williams, possessing whisky, $100 fine.

Arthur Jenkins, possessing whisky, $100 fine.

French Baker, possessing, transporting and sale of whisky, $100 fine.

Brady Harlan, possessing whisky, $100 fine.

Dan Daniels, possessing, transportation and sale of whisky, $100 fine.

T. J. Rothwell, possessing whisky, $100 fine.

Edmond Coates, possessing whisky, $100 fine.

Albert Creech, manufacturing and possessing whisky, 6 months in jail.

James Fowler, possessing whisky, $100 fine.

John Weisinger, possessing whisky, $100 fine.

George Mathias, possessing, transportation and sale of whisky, $100 fine.

Clarence Abrams, manufacturing and transportation of whisky, 6 months in jail.

Sam Pigg, manufacturing and transportation of whisky, 6 months in jail.

J. E. Pittman gave bond for sentence later on whisky charge.

Attorney C. C. Bagby, of Danville, representing a client, argued that a negro was the most likely operator of an illicit still.

Judge Cochran said:

"In my 20 years' experience on the bench I have never heard of a negro making whisky. They will buy it, sell it, drink it, but I have never yet found one making it."

A Judge Cochran released Mart Smith's Nash touring car upon payment of $100 and costs. A strong plea was made by Smith's attorneys. They pointed out that he only had less than a pint of liquor, and the car was worth some $1,400 or $1,500. Judge Cochran said that he wanted the owners of these high priced cars to know that they should not carry whisky in them; but under the extenuating circumstances shown in this instance he would release this car upon payment of $100 and the costs.

WRITES NICE STORY OF WAGO POTTERY

Courier-Journal Magazine Tells History of Growing Industry in Madison

The magazine section of the Sunday Courier-Journal had a very interesting story of the pottery works near Waco, this county, written by Laura Breckinridge McClintock. The article was accompanied by a number of pictures of the plant and the popular proprietors. What Miss McClintock says will be read with interest. She wrote as follows:

Nestling in the foothills of the Kentucky mountains in Madison county is the little sleepy hamlet of Bybee. Staggering along both sides of the dusty road which leads from Richmond to Irvine, five miles from the nearest branch railroad, few people were aware of its existence a year ago. Farmers worked together in their rocky fields as long as they toiled and then turned their plows to their children and their children's children. Few changes occurred to ripple the current of their mode of living inherited from their pioneer ancestors. They spun their own flax, ground their own meal and made their own earthenware.

Seventy-five years ago a man by the name of John Cornelison sold his few cows and horses and with his hard-earned savings purchased the only pottery industry in the community. The plant, built of huge logs was old when he bought it and was of the primitive construction. The man mined his own clay from the hillside and dumped the crumbling white lumps into an iron tub and carried water from a pond nearby. With the help of a mule he mixed his clay, molded his wares, and baked them in an improvised brick and earthenware oven. In this manner he manufactured all the bricks, tiles, chimneys, mill-crocks and wine jars for the entire countryside though he had no tools other than his own hands and a few pine twigs whittled to work with.

That was nearly a century ago. Today the same primitive industry is being carried on in Bybee-on-the-road-from-Richmond-to-Irvine, as the country people quaintly term it. With the exception of Webb Cornelison, who succeeded his father in the business, nothing is changed. The old log hut with the glimpses of blue sky through the dilapidated roof, the mixing bowl with the antiquated harness for the mule, the molding table, worn hollow in the middle, and the workman's bench drawn near the dusty window, are all the same as they were when John Cornelison molded his first butter churn long years ago.

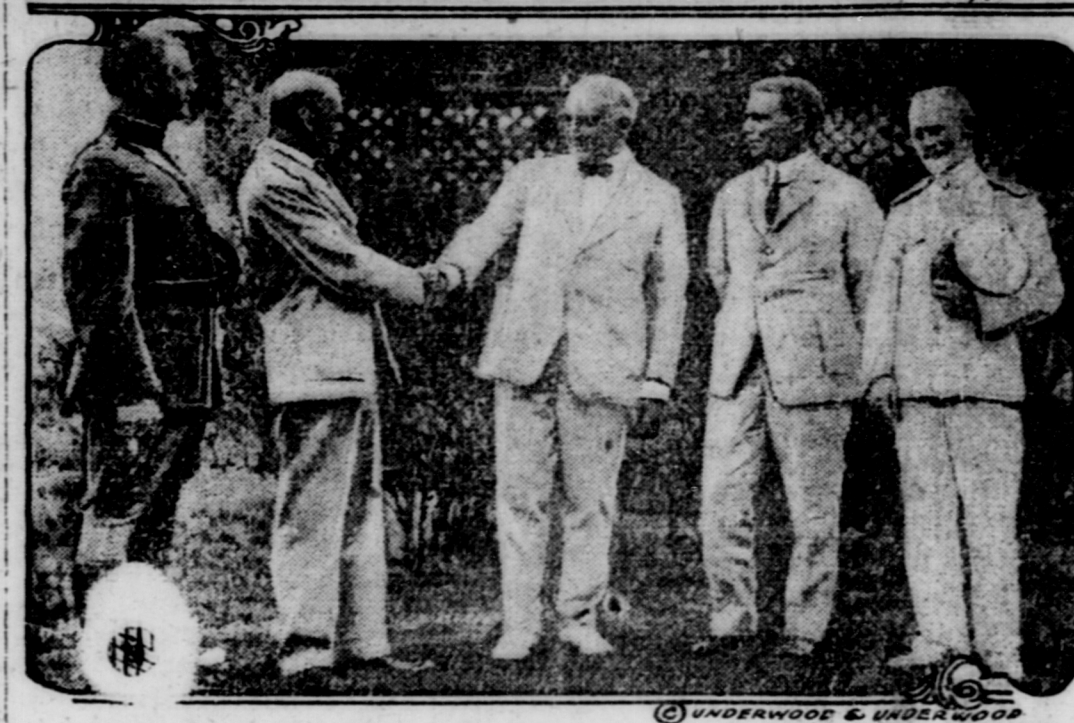

After his father died, Webb Cornelison continued in the business. For forty years off and on he has been "pottering around with potter's clay." One day while watching his wife dye an old dress he conceived the idea of putting some vegetable dye into his glazing barrel.

"I just thought I would see what would happen," he drawled. That was less than a year ago. Today hundreds of automobiles daily throng the roads from Richmond searching for the place where the blue pottery is made in the hopes that they can buy at first hand the mugs, vases and pitchers which Mr. Cornelison had already contracted for months ahead. For every piece he makes he had an order for, regardless of how many hundreds of pieces he delivers monthly, his contractors are insistent they cannot begin to fill the demand for his handiwork.

While Webb Cornelison is responsible for every piece of pottery that is manufactured, his cousin, Donald Cornelison, owns and controls the thriving, though antiquated, industry. It seems to be another case of "brains vs. brawn"—one man has the artistic ability and the other, while he can't fashion even the plainest mug, furnishes the brains for the business.

The manufacturing methods used are simplicity itself. Two or three times a week a two-horse wagon is driven to a near-by farm where potter's clay is purchased at 80 cents a load. The

On the eve of the contest the outcome is a subject of much discussion and a wide difference of opinion among both the followers of the two institutions and football in general. While the Elis have a trifle of the edge in the matter of favoritism it is the consensus of opinion among the close observers of the game that there is really little choice in the chances of the Blue and the Crimson.

JAPS TO TALK ON SEVERAL QUESTIONS

Concerning Far Eastern Affairs At Today's Sessions of Committee

(By Associated Press) Washington, Nov. 19.—Japanese statement on several questions relating to Far East will be made at today's session of the conference of the committee on Far Eastern affairs in connection with the disarmament conference.

Meanwhile another session of American delegates was called for this afternoon. A preliminary statement said that further information from the technical committee on naval limitation program is expected.

The precise attitude of the Japanese is becoming more and more the big interrogation point in the conference. When the delegates assembled today it was to Japan they looked for a hint that would reveal just what trend would be taken in the negotiations as they affect China.

Apparently light will be shed on the subject at today's conference, the result of which will not be available until later in the day.

NORMALS SHOULD BE TEACHERS' COLLEGES

Growing Movement Over This Part of Country To Advance Teachers' Opportunities

President T. J. Coates, of Eastern, has returned from attending the annual meeting of the presidents and deans of the Southern Teacher Training Institutions at Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn. This organization is composed of representatives of universities, normal schools and private and denominational institutions engaged in training teachers from all the Southern States, including Kentucky and Missouri.

The purpose of these meetings is to standardize all such institutions, and to improve their courses of instruction, their methods and general efficiency. The meeting was largely attended, and much good work was done.

One of the most interesting subjects discussed, and one in which Kentucky is interested, is the growing movement all over the United States, except the Northeast, to advance State Normal Schools to the rank of Teachers' Colleges. Especially is the movement growing in the West where educational growth along all lines is freer. The principal opposition seems to be coming from the State A. & M. Colleges and Universities. This opposition is clearly shown in the streets that have been made in late years of western normal schools by groups of men and agencies sympathetic with, or directly connected with, schools opposed to the more ambitious program of the normal schools.

On this subject, there are two schools of thought. One class of educators contend that the normal schools should prepare teachers for elementary schools only; that they should be recruited from the four-year high schools; that the course of study should be two years in length; that this course should be entirely vocational in nature; that it should prepare specifically for grade work; that it should not articulate with or have regard for higher college work. They contend that normal schools should not attempt to train teachers for high school work of any kind, or for positions as special teachers or supervisors of any kind. That must all be left to the "higher institutions." In effect, they would write over the door way of every state normal school: "So, who enters here as a pupil must leave all hope behind of ever being anything else than a grade teacher." In the estimation of this class of thinkers, any normal school that does not fit itself into these narrow molds is inadequate and not standard.

On the other hand, it is argued that no ambitious and talented man or woman in his or her senses, will enter any such institution. This class of thinkers contend that normal schools should become teachers' colleges; that some of their courses should be four years, and that they should prepare for all kinds of teaching service—elementary, high school, and special types of service.

Both of the normal schools in Kentucky from their beginning have been in charge of regents, presidents and faculties who belong to the second school of thought. They have believed and still believe that the school system of Kentucky—elementary and high school—is one system and that it has been and is then business to train teachers for all such schools. They would resist to the utmost any effort to confine them within the narrow limits of the New England and Wisconsin conception, for they believe that road leads to death of the normal school system in Kentucky. It is probable that a move will be made in the near future to make both Eastern and Western normal schools teachers' colleges.

$30 PERIOD IS BIGGEST OF CONTEST

Just Seven More Days In Which To Get the Largest Number of Extra Votes

Do you realize there is just seven more days in $30 period; that this is decidedly the biggest period of this campaign; that your friend is striving to win an automobile, and will get twice as many extra votes and at the same time get the regular votes that a subscription counts? Do you realize that this period has just a few more days and still you have not subscribed and given her your votes, when your votes might be the cause of her winning the prize she is working so hard for.

The readers of the Daily Register are now realizing each day that now is the time to help candidates, and each day they are coming in, telephoning and sending in subscriptions for some of those who are among the leaders, and $30 period is sure going to give some of these live candidates a big lead. So if you are a friend of any of the candidates, you had better hurry and subscribe for the Daily Register, and take it for ten years, or even more, for you are going to have this paper come to your home just as long as you are here. So why not secure the best daily paper in the state when you can assist your friends.

The leading candidates in the race are now running very close—just a few votes between them. You must realize this campaign closes in December, so there is no time for you to lose if you want your candidate to win.

There are now fifty live friends of the candidates interested and are devoting time and energy assisting them, so now is the time and just seven more days in big period.

WACO POTTERY

clay is carted to a large iron bin under a shed where it is mixed with water carried from a pond nearby in buckets. A mule is hitched to a pole similar to one used in grinding corn in the mountains and he walks round and round the bin revolving iron knives which mix the clay and water into a pliable paste. The potter then takes a lump (such as you see in the picture) places it on a bench, and molds it into what closely resembles a loaf of bread. His methods of cutting it are simple. He has an ordinary henp cord stretched taut across his bench and this he uses as a knife—placing his loaf of clay "dough" on the cord and bearing down on it at the desired point, making the cut sharp and smooth.
He next places his clay on an improvised wooden scale, where he weighs it. The scales are such as are commonly used in remote districts in the mountains made of a piece of wood bent in the shape of a large stirrup. The weights are rocks held by wire and the measuring rod is notched for pounds and ounces.

Only they are not standard pounds and ounces. A visitor acquired what the notches meant.
The black haired, blue eyed, slow moving potter explained that each notch represented not an ounce, but the "whereabouts" of what a candlestick or tea pot weighs. He next places his clay on a flat iron table which he revolves at will by a foot wheel.
Then constantly dipping his hands into a can of water, with several home-made wooden spatulas he fashions the beautiful native pottery which has gained such widespread vogue in Kentucky within the last year. He works with deliberate strokes, and yet with surprising rapidity.
He made seven candlesticks in less than a quarter of an hour without any apparent haste or effort and a hundred and fifty candlesticks a day, he stated, is a good average. He has no method of telling how broad the base or how tall an article should be.

"I jest sorta go by my eye," he explained as he wiped his broad flat fingers on his jeans.

After the articles are moulded, they are placed on a shelf and allowed to dry naturally for several days before they are "fired." After three or four thousand pieces are finished they are dipped into a glaze and dye mixture and then packed in a brick oven.
A fire is built of logs and a slow heat is maintained for 48 hours after which the articles are ready for sale.

Sometimes the heat is too much and a lot is ruined. Sometimes they are not baked enough. In that case the lot is confined to the rubbish heap and a new bat h is prepared. Sometimes too much blue dye is placed in the wooden tub where the dipping is done and an "off color" is the result. But there is no irate manager to come tearing in looking like he is going to have apoplexy any moment to "blow up" the temperamental artisan.

The business from start to finish is conducted in the simplest possible manner. There are no columns marked "profit and loss" against the haphazard industry of manufacturing pottery. The men keep no books. When asked how many hundreds of churns they sold yearly they looked pained and somewhat helpless. If they had enough to live on, and if they have no enormous surplus of stock on hand at the end of the year then they have made money in their simple philosophy.

"Writin' down how many we sold don't make any difference in how much money we get," they argue, nor does the suggestion that they confine their activities to pottery alone cause any ripple in their ideas on how a living should be made. Of course they have more than a ready demand for more pottery than they manufacture and in years when the fruit crop fails they are sadly overstocked with fruit jars, but then the "home folks" just naturally have to have fruit jars, churns and ornaments for the church yard cemetery, and we always have made them and just suppose we always will.

There have been persistent rumors that the clay beds of Marison county were so limited that pottery makers have been forced to move their shops from place to place owing to the limited supply of clay. The Cornelson family have been using the same clay bed for 75 years and there has been no indication of the supply becoming exhausted, they said.

Prof. Alfred Miller, Lexington, head of the Geology Department University of Kentucky, said last week that a clay expert had been sent to Kentucky recently from Cornell University to make a survey and report of the clay in the state. Prof. Miller conferred with Prof. Heinrich Reis, Cornell University, frequently, and they were of the opinion that there are no indications that the river deposit clay found only in Madison county was limited. Prof.
Reis reported that a rare clay had been found near High Bridge which was a volcanic ash deposit, and, if some chemicals could be found to counteract its explosive contents, it could be used com-mercially to good advantage.

Papers Say Nice Things

About Combs, Normal Star

The papers are all saying nice things about Earl Combs, Normal star, who has been signed by the Louisville club of the American Association. His friends at home here know that he deserves them and they are very confident that he will "make good" in real fast company. The Lexington Leader had this:

We knew it.
Earl Combs has been signed up by the Louisville Colonels and will report for training next spring.

The Richmond youth attracted the attention of Captain Neal, of the Colonels, the day the Red-played the Cincinnati Reds on Devereaux Field. Combs was playing first that day, a position far removed from his ordinary place in left field, but he batted 500 against Eppa Jephtha Rixey and Hod Eller, besides getting ten putouts and playing in faultless style.

Combs played second base and short for the Eastern Kentucky State Normal team and during the summer played several games with the local club. He is a sensational fielder and one of the most dependable batters in the state. He holds the record for the longest hit ever made on Devereaux Field.

Schliesmann's Saxophone

Sextette Coming Monday

It is not often that an opportunity is offered the music lovers of Richmond such as will be presented at the Opera House Monday when Schliesmann's Saxaphone Sextette is the attraction and it promises to be the best musical attraction of the season.
The management was able to secure this talented organization for one day engagement for a figure which possibly sets a new mark for high class attractions locally. They are to be complimented for their desire to give patrons the best obtainable.

Schliesmann's Saxophone Six is composed of finished musicians, who render a program of selections on saxophones ranging in quality from jazz to grand opera.
Their imitation of a pipe organ is said to be a revelation. A black faced comedian enlivens the entertainment with his weird antics and is claimed to be irresistible in his efforts to coax laughs from his audience.

INDIGESTION
Busy Public Official Says Theodor's Black-Draught Helps Him Keep Physically Fit.

Clay City, Ky.—"I have been in business here for twenty-one years; am also coroner, riding the Kentucky hills and hollows in all kinds of weather and under all kinds of conditions," says Mr. Sam T. Carr, of this place. "To be able to do so, I must keep physically fit, and Theodor's Black-Draught is my stand-by."

"These trips used to give me headaches, and that I found, came from hurried meals or from constipation."

"I was convinced that Black-Draught was good, so now I use it, and it gives perfect satisfaction. It acts on the liver, relieves indigestion, and certainly is splendid. I am never without it."

"When you have a feeling of discomfort after meals, causing a bloating sensation, headache, bad breath, and similar common symptoms, try taking a pinch of Black-Draught after meals—a pinch of the dry powder, washed down with a swallow of water. This has been found to assist the stomach and liver to carry on their normal work, and helps prevent, or relieve, constipation."

Your druggist can supply you with this well-known, purely-vegetable liver medicine. Insist upon Theodor's, the original and only genuine Black-Draught liver medicine. NO-137a

MADISON HI PUTS IT ON NICHOLASVILLE

Madison Hi gridiron warriors annexed another victory to their string Friday afternoon on the Normal field when they defeated the fast Nicholasville Hi team, the victors over Lancaster Hi, by a score of 12 to 0. The locals played consistent ball throughout the game and at no time could their offense be checked by the Jessamine county visitors. Talton Stone played the stellar role for the Madison boys, carrying both touchdowns over the line and gaining steadily throughout the game. He saw stars on the first play but soon returned to the play in time to score the first touchdown. Both goals were missed by Hacker after the touchdowns. One encouraging thing for the eyes of the fans was the fight shown by the Madison lads. With the dope against them, they fought the whole game and solved the Nicholasville attack at the start of the contest.

After playing the first quarter with the ball in Madison's territory most of the time, they rallied and scored their first touchdown before the whistle blew for the half. They punted to Nicholasville's 20 yard line where the visitors tried to return it by the same route. Big "Mule" Allman, who proved to be the mainstay in the Madison line throughout the contest, broke through the opposing line and blocked the punt. Madison recovered and started marching toward the goal. A pass from Stone to Hurst added ten more yards. A penalty covered half the distance to the goal and T. Stone received the ball and carried it the rest of the way around right end. As the whistle blew for the half Madison was marching steadily toward the west goal.

The Madison team outplayed Nicholasville in the third quarter, but failed to score. In the last period they added the last touchdown as the result of an intercepted pass. "Pete" Anderson snugged the leave on the nine-yard line but was downed in his tracks. From this position Stone again circled right end for touchdown. He shook off a Nicholasville man and crossed the line with three on his back.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN

Friends will be sorry to know that the condition of Mr. R. C. H. Covington, who has been ill the past seven weeks, is unimproved. Dr. S. G. Zinke, of Cincinnati, was here in consultation with Dr. Gibson Friday evening.

Mrs. E. H. Bybee, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Myers, has returned to her home in Richmond. Mrs. Myers is convalescent after an illness of ten weeks.—Louisville Herald.

W. D. Oldham & Company have made arrangements with the Ogden Shoe Company, of Milwaukee, to handle their line in this city. In Friday's paper appeared the first of a large number of advertisements which this company will run in the Daily Register in order to introduce their shoes in this section.

"Dick" Bowles, an old Richmond boy, is being welcomed this week by his many friends, when he returned from an extended tour of twenty-five states with Howe's Greater Shows. "Dick" is recognized as a wonder musician on the cornet and ever since he was knee-high to a duck he has displayed talent, having entertained large crowds on the street of Richmond when a mere boy with the melodious tones made on a five cent tin flute. Mr. Bowles will remain here a short while, the guest of friends and relatives.

A specialty advertising man has been in Richmond this week assisting the ladies of the First Christian church in securing advertisements from the merchants to be placed on a large thermometer which will be stationed at the Glyndon hotel. It is understood the ladies made quite a neat little sum from the proceeds.

Twelve of Richmond's hustling merchants are cooperating with the management of the local theatres in putting on in Richmond what is known as Merchant's Day. Each one of them will give away absolutely free on Tuesday of each week a ticket for Wednesday's program at the Alhambra and Opera House. Each person calling at these stores on Wednesday and making a cash purchase of one dollar or more is entitled to a ticket. These merchants are planning to offer unusual bargains for each Wednesday, so watch next Tuesday's paper. Further particulars of Merchant's Day are published in a full page ad in this edition.

Two members of the Schliesmann's Sextette, who will appear Monday at the Opera House in vaudeville, were in the city last night and were invited up to the Legion club room where they gave them several numbers on their saxophones. They were accompanied by young Joe Giunchigliani, and it was a treat for the Legion boys. It will be of interest to music lovers in Richmond to know that two members of this sextette are members of the original Brown Brothers Jazz Orchestra, who have made so many records for the Victor Company. This sextette is a Keith vaudeville act and plays at the Ben Ali, Lexington, for a three night's engagement next week.

Mr. B. E. Belne left this week for an extended visit to relatives in Alabama.
